

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An optical recording medium includes a recording layer and a dielectric layer formed in the vicinity of the recording layer and the 5 dielectric layer contains an oxide as a primary component and being added with nitrogen. The thus constituted optical recording medium can exhibit excellent optical characteristics with respect to a laser beam of desired wavelength used for recording data and reproducing data.